TREND:

During the 2010 and 2020 decade Livingston County's growth in housing units has slowed compared to previous decades, with a percent change of 7.7% compared to a 23.6% growth in the previous 2000 - 2010 decade. Over the last 20 years between the 2000 Census and the 2020 Census, Livingston County has added 19,522 housing units (33.1% growth), with Genoa Township adding more housing units than any other community (2,520). Interestingly, Genoa Township was not the township to gain the most population during this same time frame (it was Oceola). Two additional high-growth townships gained over 2,000 housing units during this 20-year period, they include: Green Oak and Oceola townships.
